great impact on the local industry with private owners unable to compete. The infrastructure of our roads and highways also enabled quicker journeys to Dover Port, with less people needing an overnight stay.

Sadly, to date, many guest houses have been sold, owners retired, others moved on in different directions. Unfortunately, we have witnessed the demise of many local establishments, some of which had been in business for over forty years. Guest houses, were and still are, a valuable British institution, not only providing extensive knowledge of the area, but also an invaluable personal service.

What was once a thriving local industry in Dover, sadly has now been reduced to just a handful. However, we wish the remaining establishments continued success for the future.
